Course Description

Students will investigate the pedagogical reasoning in comparing a traditional learning environment and “The Flipped Classroom” model. The flipped classroom reverses how class and home time are utilized. In the flipped classroom model, students watch a lesson (or lecture) on video while at home and traditional ‘homework’ is done in class allowing for more project-based learning, discussion time, and student access to the teacher’s expertise and their peers. This course will encompass researching the benefits of the flipped classroom model as revealed in the literature; discovering the tools necessary to facilitate the flipped classroom; researching resources for using the flipped classroom in differing grade levels and subject areas; how the common core standards allow more freedom in creating a flipped classroom environment; and problem areas for instituting the flipped classroom. This course addresses standards set forth for educators within both the National Educational Technology Standards for Students, the National Board for Professional Teaching Standards, and the Common Core Standards. In addition, this course will help teachers meet the goals of the 2010 National Education Technology Plan, which set forth the following goals for educators:

- 1) The Practice of Connected Teaching
- 2) Connecting with Exemplary Practices
- 3) Connecting to Content, Expertise, and Activities Through Online Communities
- 4) Connecting with the Growing Demand for Skilled Online Instruction
- 5) Closing the Technology Gap in Teaching
- 6) Connecting With Students to Personalize and Motivate Learning

The flipped classroom model can be highly motivational, provide for very individualized (differentiated) instruction, increase problem solving opportunities, provides for blended learning practices, and increases contact between teacher and student through more hands-on interactions

Note: Required textbook must be purchased separately.

National Standards Addressed in This Course

National Board for Professional Teaching Standards (NBPTS)

(<http://www.nbpts.org/standards-five-core-propositions/>)

First published in 1989 and updated in 2016, What Teachers Should Know and Be Able to Do articulates the National Board's Five Core Propositions for teaching. The Five Core Propositions - comparable to medicine's Hippocratic Oath — set forth the profession's vision for accomplished teaching. Together, the propositions form the basis of all National Board Standards and the foundation for National Board Certification. Course assignments have been designed so students can demonstrate excellence against these professional teaching standards whenever possible.

- Proposition 1: Teachers are committed to students and their learning
- Proposition 2: Teachers know the subject they teach and how to teach those subjects to students
- Proposition 3: Teachers are responsible for managing and monitoring student learning
- Proposition 4: Teachers think systematically about their practice and learn from experience
- Proposition 5: Teachers are members of learning communities

In addition, students are encouraged to email or phone the instructor at any time. Students will also receive feedback on the required assignments as they are submitted.

Discussion Forums

Participation is an important expectation of this course and all online courses. Online discussions promote reflection and analysis while allowing students to appreciate and evaluate positions that others express. While students may not be engaging with the same students throughout this course they will be expected to offer comments, questions, and replies to the discussion question whenever possible. The faculty role in the discussion forum is that of an observer and facilitator.

Coursework Hours

Based on the Carnegie Unit standard, a unit of graduate credit measures academic credit based on the number of hours the student is engaged in learning. This includes all time spent on the course: reading the textbook, watching videos, listening to audio lessons, researching topics, writing papers, creating projects, developing lesson plans, posting to discussion boards, etc. Coursework offered for FPU Continuing Education graduate credit adheres to 45 hours per semester unit for the 900-level courses. Therefore, a student will spend approximately 135 hours on a typical 3-unit course.

Services for Students with Disabilities

Students with disabilities are eligible for reasonable accommodations in their academic work in all classes. In order to receive assistance, the student with a disability must provide the Academic Support Center with documentation, which describes the specific disability. The documentation must be from a qualified professional in the area of the disability (i.e. psychologist, physician or educational diagnostician). Students with disabilities should contact the Academic Support Center to discuss academic and other needs as soon as they are diagnosed with a disability. Once documentation is on file, arrangements for reasonable accommodations can be made.
