Course Description

The United States has fallen behind several other nations in the percentage of young people who are enrolling in and completing higher education. Despite the American ideal of equal opportunity, access to college can vary greatly depending on one's socio-economic background, ethnicity, quality of K-12 educational opportunities, and parental educational attainment. This researched-based course will explore college access issues and the roles educators can play in promoting an equitable college-going culture. The course is designed to provide educators with insights and proven strategies that can help motivate students and their families to prepare for, enroll in, and succeed in college.

Note: Required books must be acquired separately.

National Standards and This Course

National /Common Core Standards

This is not a course whose content is found in national or state curriculum standards. While such standards ideally could address the matter of creating a college-going culture, they generally do not. However, the American School Counselor Association does have a statement of ethical standards and a content framework that relate to this course. One of the premises of this course is that ALL K-12 educators, and not just guidance counselors, would serve the best interests of their students by being college-going advocates.

The following statements are excerpted from “Ethical Standards for School Counselors” adopted by the American School Counselor Association in 1984 and last revised in 2004:

(from the Preamble)

- Each person has the right to be respected, be treated with dignity and have access to a comprehensive school counseling program that advocates for and affirms all students from diverse populations regardless of ethnic/racial status, age, economic status, special needs, English as a second language or other language group, immigration status, sexual orientation, gender, gender identity/expression, family type, religious/spiritual identity and appearance.
- Each person has the right to receive the information and support needed to move toward self-direction and self-development and affirmation within one’s group identities, with special care being given to students who have historically not received adequate educational services: students of color, low socio-economic students, students with disabilities and students with non-dominant language backgrounds.
- Each person has the right to understand the full magnitude and meaning of his/her educational choices and how those choices will affect future opportunities.

(from Section A.1 “Responsibilities to Students”)

- The professional school counselor is concerned with the educational, academic, career, personal, and social needs and encourages the maximum development of every student.

(from Section A.3 “Counseling Plans”)

- The professional counselor advocates for counseling plans supporting students’ right to choose from the wide array of options when they leave secondary education. Such plans will be regularly reviewed to update students regarding critical information they need to make informed decisions.

The following statements are excerpted from the executive summary of the American School Counselor Association National Standards for Student Academic, Career, and Personal/Social Development:

Individual Student Planning:

- School counselors coordinate ongoing systematic activities designed to assist students individually in establishing personal goals and developing future plans.

Academic Development:

- Students will complete school with the academic preparation essential to choose from a wide range of substantial post-secondary options, including college.

Career Development:

- Students will employ strategies to achieve future career goals with success and satisfaction.
- Students will understand the relationship between personal qualities, education, training and the world of work.

National Board for Professional Teaching Standards (NBPTS)

\(http://www.nbpts.org/standards-five-core-propositions/\)

First published in 1989 and updated in 2016, What Teachers Should Know and Be Able to Do articulates the National Board’s Five Core Propositions for teaching. The Five Core Propositions - comparable to medicine’s Hippocratic Oath — set forth the profession’s vision for accomplished teaching. Together, the propositions form the basis of all National Board Standards and the foundation for National Board Certification. Course assignments have been designed so students can demonstrate excellence against these professional teaching standards whenever possible.

- Proposition 1: Teachers are committed to students and their learning
- Proposition 2: Teachers know the subject they teach and how to teach those subjects to students
- Proposition 3: Teachers are responsible for managing and monitoring student learning
- Proposition 4: Teachers think systematically about their practice and learn from experience
- Proposition 5: Teachers are members of learning communities

Instructor/Student Contact Information

Throughout the course participants will be communicating with the instructor and their classmates on a regular basis using asynchronous discussion forums. Students are provided with instructor contact information in the event they want to make email or phone contact. In addition, students are encouraged to email or phone the instructor at any time. Students will also receive feedback on the required assignments as they are submitted.

Forums

Participation is an important expectation of this course and all online courses. Online discussions promote reflection and analysis while allowing students to appreciate and evaluate positions that others express. While students may not be engaging with the same students throughout this course, they will be expected to offer comments, questions, and replies to the discussion question whenever possible. The faculty role in the discussion forum is that of an observer and facilitator.

Coursework Hours

Based on the Carnegie Unit standard, a unit of graduate credit measures academic credit based on the number of hours the student is engaged in learning. This includes all time spent on the course: reading the textbook, watching videos, listening to audio lessons, researching topics, writing papers, creating projects, developing lesson plans, posting to discussion boards, etc. Coursework offered for FPU Continuing Education graduate credit adheres to 45 hours per semester unit for the 900-level courses. Therefore, a student will spend approximately 135 hours on a typical 3-unit course.

Services for Students with Disabilities

Students with disabilities are eligible for reasonable accommodations in their academic work in all classes. In order to receive assistance, the student with a disability must provide the Academic Support Center with documentation, which describes the specific disability. The documentation must be from a qualified professional in the area of the disability (i.e. psychologist, physician or educational diagnostician). Once documentation is on file, arrangements for reasonable accommodations can be made. For more information and for downloadable forms, please go to <https://www.fresno.edu/departments/disability-access-education>.

Technology Requirements

To successfully complete the course requirements, course participants will need Internet access, can send and receive email, know how to manage simple files in a word processing program, and have a basic understanding of the Internet. Please remember that the instructor is not able to offer technical support. If you need technical support, please contact your Internet Service Provider.
